Author of numerous articles for magazines and the press, upon Medicine, Direct Legislation and Social Economics. Dr. Haynes drafted, and was instrumental in incorporating in the charter of the city of Los Angeles, in 1903, the Initiative, Referendum and Recall Amendments. The Recall provision is a democratic innovation in governmental methods, giving to the majority of the city's electors the power to discharge from office for incompetency or dishonesty, at any time, any elected city official. Los Angeles was the first city in the United States, if not in the world, to incorporate this democratic measure, and its example has induced about thirty cities throughout the United States, and one state, to incorporate the same provision in their basic laws. It would appear that ultimately it will be introduced very generally throughout the country. Home address: 945 S. Figueroa St. Business: 702 Union Trust Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal., U.S.A.

HOWARD, Henry Fitz-Alan: Duke of Norfolk:
Earl Marshal of England. Born at Carlton Terrace, London, Dec. 27, 1847; son of the fourteenth Duke and Lady Augusta Lyons, daughter of 1st Lord Lyons. He married Lady Flora Hastings, the daughter of Baron Donington. He owns about 50,000 acres of land in Great Britain. His heir by the British law is the Earl of Arundel. The present Duke of Norfolk succeeded his father when he was thirteen years of age. For some years past he has actively interested himself in London Municipal matters and in all that concerns the Roman Catholic Church in England, of which he is perhaps the most distinguished member in the Kingdom. Among his many offices and dignities is that of Chief Butler of England, and Premier Duke. In 1887 he was selected by Queen Victoria to act as Her Majesty's Special Envoy to Rome in connection with the Papal Jubilee of Pope Leo XIII. In 1896 he was elected first Lord Mayor of Sheffield and in 1895 appointed Postmaster-General of Great Britain, which last office he held for five years. The Duke also served in the late Boer War. The Howard family is one of the oldest in England, and boasts that it was unaffected in its allegiance to the See of Rome by the English Reformation. In 1908 the Duke of Norfolk was prominently connected with the Roman Catholic Eucharistic Conference held in England. He holds many orders and degrees. He is also the head official of the College of Arms in London, England, which ancient institution has control of the granting of coats of arms. HOWARD DE WALDEN, Lord: Thomas Evelyn Ellis:

Born May 9, 1880. Educated at Eton and Sandhurst. Served in the Boer War. Lord Howard de Walden is nothing if not versatile; he writes poetry and plays, is the best swordsman in England, and is a keen motorist, being equally at home on the road or on the sea; in fact, he is the owner of a small fleet of very fast motorboats. One of England's richest Peers, Lord Howard derives most of his income from ground rents in the Marylebone district of London, but he is also a fairly large landowner in Scotland. Audley End, near Saffron Walden in Essex, his home in the country, is a delightful place, and called forth from James I. the remark that the house was "too much for a King, though it might do very well for a Lord Treasurer." Lord Howard has seen active service in South Africa, was at one time in the 10th Hussars, and succeeded his father in the title twelve years ago. Address: 37 Belgrave Sq., London, S.W., England.

JEROME, Jerome Klapka:
Humorist journalist and playwright. Born May 2, 1859. His father was a Church of England clergyman. Married, in 1888, Georgina Henrietta Stanley Neeza. His early manhood was spent as a clerk in the service of the London & Northwestern Railway Company. In 1889 he took the public by successful surprise with his book, "Three Men in a Boat." Of late years he has entered the field of playwriting, and has scored a tremendous triumph with a drama, "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," in which the leading roles were played by Johnston Forbes Robertson, Miss Gertrude Elliott and Miss Alice Crawford, at the Terry Theatre, London. This play is now being produced in the United States of America with splendid success. His description of the Passion Play of Ober-Ammergau, in one of his works, is considered a classic for its word-coloring and style. He has written the following books: "Letters to Clorinda"; "The Second Thoughts of an Idle Fellow"; "Three Men on the Bummel"; "Miss Hobbs"; "Paul Kelver"; "Tea Table Talk"; "Tommy & Co."; "Idle Ideas in 1906"; "Susan in Search of a Husband"; "They and I"; "The Angel and the Author." He was also editor of the Idler, 1892-97. Address: Monk's Corner, Marlow Common, Bucks, England.

JERSEY, Countess of:
Born Oct. 29, 1849. Lady Jersey, who is the daughter of the late Lord Leigh, has for many years occupied a unique position. She is not modern, in the sense that she neither shoots, golfs, drives a motor, nor plays bridge, but she is a deeply read woman, a clear thinker, a clever writer, and, above all, a fluent speaker. An energetic worker in the cause of charity, Lady Jersey is known far and wide for her devotion to children; one of her organizations is the Children's Happy Evenings Association, which teaches the little ones of the "submerged tenth" not lessons, but simply how to play. Lady Jersey is a good linguist, and was at one time an indefatigable globe trotter; in the course of her wanderings she has penetrated into the lesser-known parts of China, Japan and Samoa. Her productions include: "Poems and Hymns for Young Children"; "Sleeping Beauty," a play for children; "Maurice"; "Eric, Prince of Lorlonia"; "St. George of England," drama for children. Address: Middleton Park, Bichester, Osterley Park, Isleworth, England.

JERSEY, Earl of:
Born March 20, 1845. Educated at Eton and Balliol College, Oxford. Lord Jersey has held the following offices: Lord-in-Waiting; Paymaster-General; Governor-General of New South Wales; and Member of the Oxford County Council. He owns about 20,000 acres of land in Great Britain. He married, in 1872, the Honorable Margaret Elizabeth Leigh, the present Countess of Jersey. His heir is Viscount Villiers. Address: Osterley Park, Isleworth, England.

JESSE, Richard Henry:

1905. Studied in University of Munich, spring and summer semester, 1906, and the University of Berlin, fall and winter semester, 1905-06. LL.D., Missouri Valley College, 1906; LL.D., Washington University, 1907; LL.D., University of Missouri, Sept., 1908. President of University of Missouri, July 1, 1891-July 1, 1908. Because of ill health, retired on Carnegie Foundation (by special offer made by the Trustees) on July 1, 1908; in 1909, by request, he became Emeritus Professor of Ancient and Mediæval History in the University of Missouri. His purpose henceforth is to devote himself chiefly to writing and to lecturing. Dr. Jesse was one of the leaders in effecting that consolidation (1884) which has made Tulane University of Louisiana the best seat of learning south of the Maryland-Virginia-Missouri line. In seventeen years he built up the University of Missouri at a remarkable rate, and he greatly multiplied the number of effective high schools in the State. Joint author (with Dr. E. A. Allen) of "Missouri Literature," and has written pamphlets and papers on educational topics for periodicals and the transactions of various societies. Clubs: Columbia, St. Louis Railway. Member of the Order of Masons and of other bodies, learned, social, educational or fraternal. By church affiliation he is a Baptist of liberal views. Politics: Democrat. Married, 1882, Addie H. KROPOTKIN, Prince: Peter Alexeivitch Kropotkin:
Scientist and man of letters. Born in Russia, Dec. 9, 1842. Educated at the University of St. Petersburg. Prince Kropotkin's best work has been in geographical studies, explorations and discoveries. In 1864 he was awarded the gold medal by the Russian Geographical Society for a journey through North Manchuria. In 1871 he explored and studied the glacial deposits in Sweden and Finland. In 1874 he was arrested in Russia and sent to the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul because of his political and revolutionary expressions and actions. He escaped from prison and in 1876 went to England for asylum. He subsequently started at Geneva, Switzerland, an anarchist paper, and for this was expelled from the country. He then went to France, where he was sentenced to five years' imprisonment because of his anarchistic propaganda. He was, however, liberated after serving three years. The whole world recognizes the ability and scholarship of Prince Kropotkin, and admires his sincerity of purpose, but all healthy-minded men condemn his anarchistic vagaries. Anarchism with him personally is simply a philosophical theory, but many vicious, ignorant, criminal persons have, in the past, sought to justify their war against organized society from the writings of Prince Kropotkin. He has written many books and contributed articles to the Encyclopædia Britannica and Chambers' Encyclopedia. One of his latest works, entitled "The Great French Revolution," admirably translated by Mrs. Dryhurst, was published in 1909. Address: Muswell Hill, London, N., England.

LAGERLOF, Selma:

Swedish woman of letters. Born in Vermland, Sweden, Nov. 20, 1858; daughter of late Eric Gustaf Lagerlöf (officer in the Army) and Louise (Wallroth) Lagerlöf. In Dec., 1909, the Nobel prize for literature was awarded for the first time to a woman, Miss Selma Lagerlöf. In 1908 it was bestowed upon Prof. Euken of Jena University, the year before that Kipling received it, and the year before that Bjornstjerne Bjornson. The prize is a purse of $40,000 and is awarded by the Swedish Academy, which is composed of eighteen members. Last year her countrymen celebrated her fiftieth birthday in a national festival attended by scientists and statesmen and members of the clergy and the King himself. All were delighted to do her honor. But Miss Lagerlöf has always taken prizes for literary work. In 1907 the University of Upsala gave her the degree of doctor of literature, and the laurel wreath was placed upon her brow in the cathedral, where she stood directly beneath the tablet of Linnæus, the father of botany. Then on another occasion she won a literary prize of a large sum of money from a magazine. While Miss Lagerlöf has been a successful writer for many years, it is her recent work, "The Adventures of Nils," which was adopted as a textbook by the National Teachers' Association and is now in use in the folk schools of Sweden, that carried her intimately into the homes of her countrymen. She was 30 years old before she began to write. Her mother's brother, Christian Wallroth, is a celebrated landscape painter. Miss Lagerlöf is a graduate of the Teachers' College of Stockholm and was for a few years a teacher. Miss Lagerlöf, while a thinker and writer along spiritual lines, is not allied to any religious sect. She is distinctly non-sectarian, but that she must be an apostle of the so-called new thought is apparent from the symbolic quality that creeps into all of her writings. She is a suffragist and is a member of the Frederica Bremer Association, a powerful woman's club for social betterment and the enfranchisement of women. Address: Falun, Sweden.

P.C., 1897; G.C.M.G., cr. 1897; D.C.L., LL.D., K.C. The first French-Canadian Premier of the Dominion of Canada. Was born at St. Lin, Quebec, Nov. 20, 1841, and educated for the bar. Called in 1864, he rose rapidly in his profession, and in 1871 was elected as a Liberal to the Quebec Provincial Assembly, and his high personal character, his undoubted loyalty and attachment to the connection of the Colony with Great Britain, together with his great oratorical powers, which have earned for him the title "Silver-tongued Laurier," soon gave him high rank in the Liberal party. On the retirement of Mr. Blake in 1891 he was chosen as leader of the liberal party and at the General Election of 1896 he led his followers to a notable victory. His tariff legislation during 1897, giving Great Britain the benefit of preferential trade with Canada, aroused much enthusiasm, both in the colony and at home, and he was warmly welcomed when he went to London to attend the Jubilee festivities. He was then appointed a member of the Privy Council, and made a G.C.M.G. In 1900 he again secured approval, both of the Dominion and the Empire, by the prompt despatch of Canadian troops to aid the Mother Country in South Africa, and led his party to another victory at the polls in November. He attended the Colonial Conference and the Coronation in England in 1902. He was again returned to power in 1904 and 1908, and in 1907 attended the Imperial Conference in London. LIBBEY, Edward Drummond:
Was born April 17, 1854, at Chelsea, Mass., U.S.A.; son of Wm. L. and Julia (Miller) Libbey. The father was founder of the New England Glass Company, and in 1874, being managing proprietor, took his son Edward in as a partner. At his father's death, in 1883, he became managing proprietor. In 1888 the plant was removed to Toledo, Ohio, on account of the discovery of natural gas near by, which became ideal fuel for glass works. The company was reorganized, under the name of The Libbey Glass Company, and it soon became famous for the most beautiful cut-glass ever made in America. In 1893, at the 400th Centennial of the discovery of America, known as the Columbian Exposition, Mr. Libbey built a palace within the grounds for the manufacture and sale of his cut-glass. Soon after, appreciating the genius of Mr. Michael J. Owens, one of the workers in the factory, as an inventor, he spent generously and patiently to enable Owens to perfect his machines, until they ripened into finished inventions. Then Mr. Libbey founded great and successful stock companies. Of these, the Owens Bottle Machine Co., founded in 1903, was the latest and greatest; the sale to the German Company, Europaischer Verband, of all the countries of Continental Europe, in 1907, alone made many fortunes, and is supplanting all other means of bottle manufacture on the continent. Half a dozen great and profitable companies are the outgrowth of these inventions, all working profitably, thanks to the combined genius of the inventor and the faith, boldness and generosity of his benefactor and partner. Mr. Libbey is the founder and most bountiful benefactor of the Art Museum in Toledo, and in all his public and domestic life is "a prince of a man." He was married in Toledo, in 1880, to Florence Scott, of that city, a daughter of Maurice A. Scott, deceased. Address: Toledo, Ohio, U.S.A.

MARCONI, Guglielmo (in English William):
The inventor of Wireless Telegraphy. By profession an electrical engineer. Born in Bologna, Italy, of an Italian father and an Irish mother, April 25, 1874. Married, in 1905, the Hon. Beatrice O'Brien, daughter of Lord Inchiquin. Educated at the University of Bologna. His first experiments in wireless telegraphy were made in Bologna, then tested in England, and later by the Italian Ministry of Marine. His invention was a great success from the start. In 1899 he established wireless communication between England and France. To-day, wireless telegraphy is one of the ordinary useful facts of every-day life. It is employed by nearly all of the principal shipping lines, and by the British, American and Italian navies. It has already saved thousands of human beings, and millions of tons of cargo, from the destruction of the ocean. Its use on every vessel carrying human freight ought to be by law compulsory everywhere. Mr. Marconi has succeeded in sending a message by his wonderful system across the Atlantic Ocean, from Poldhu, Cornwall, England, to St. Johns, Newfoundland, Canada, a distance of fully 2,100 miles. This extraordinary young man has been decorated and honored by the King of Italy and the Tsar of Russia. In 1907 he established a trans-Atlantic wireless telegraph service for general public use between England and America. Mr. Marconi shows his preference for England by having his permanent residence in that country. Address: Watergate House, York Bldgs., Adelphi, W.C., London, England.

MAXIM, Hudson:
Inventor, mechanical engineer. Was born at Orneville, Piscataquis County, Me., U.S.A., Feb. 3, 1853; son of Isaac and Harriet Boston (Stevens) Maxim. The founder of the family in this country, Samuel Maxim, was of French Huguenot descent, and emigrated from England before 1700, settling at Rochester, Mass. Hudson Maxim left school at 25 years of age, after completing his academical studies at Kent's Hill, Me., where he paid special attention to chemistry, engineering, and the natural sciences. In 1875 he formulated the hypothesis of the compound nature of so-called atoms, which has become a generally accepted theory only within the past few years, as a result of the experiments on radiant matter. Mr. Maxim's theory was published in the Scientific American Supplement in 1889. He was engaged in the printing and subscription book publishing business in Pittsfield, Mass., from 1883 to 1888, and of one book of which he was the author, entitled "Penwork Self-Instructor," nearly 500,000 copies were sold. He took up the business of ordnance and explosives in 1888. In 1890 he built a dynamite factory and smokeless powder mill at Maxim, N.J., a place named for him, where he developed the first smokeless powder to be adopted by the U.S. Government. In 1897 he sold the smokeless powder inventions to E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company, Wilmington, Del., and since 1898 has been consulting engineer and expert in the experimental department of that company. In 1901 he sold to the U.S. Government the secret of his invention known as Maximite, the first high explosive to be fired through heavy armor plate. This explosive at once placed the United States in the lead of all nations in the use of high explosive projectiles. He is also the inventor of a detonating fuse for high explosive projectiles, which has proven the most successful of any fuse yet developed. He has recently perfected a new smokeless powder of his invention known as Stabillite, which has many advantages over any other form of smokeless powder. He is the inventor of a new system of driving automobile torpedoes of the Whitehead type, by means of a self-combustive material known as motorite, by which much longer range and speed than heretofore is made possible. He invented the process now in general use in the United States for making calcium carbide continuously by the electrical resistance of a molten carbide conductor, removing the carbide as fast as formed, and simultaneously supplying fresh material to the heating field. This process was purchased by the Union Carbide Company, in 1906. Married, in 1896, Lilian Durban, daughter of the Rev. Wm. Durban, M.A., a well-known linguist and litterateur of London, England. MONNOT, John Ferreol:

Metallurgical and Mining Engineer. Born at Classon Point, Westchester Co., N.Y., May 13, 1864; son of John B. and Louise E. (Ponsot) Monnot. Entered the Lycée St. Louis, France, at eight years of age, and subsequently the Polytechnic school. Later, at the request of the United States government, was received at the Ecole Nationale Supérieure des Mines de Paris, where he was graduated in 1888 as metallurgical and mining engineer. After spending three years in mining and metallurgical establishments in France, Belgium, and Germany, to complete his practical education, visited South America and explored especially the mining districts of Venezuela, where he discovered valuable gold and iron mines. Since his return to New York, has been engaged in metallurgical researches. Has discovered different processes for welding coatings of metals, such as copper and silver on steel cores, for which he has obtained patents in all countries. The most valuable of these is his process for welding copper to steel, the new product being called Monnot copper-clad steel, and as a result copper and steel have been com-mercially welded together for the first time in such form that a steel core can be produced with a copper coating of any desired thickness. Has also patented a process for obtaining homogeneous and sound castings of metals, which is of great advantage in the making of steel ingots, as it improves the quality and reduces the cost. Divides his time between New York, where he is consulting engineer for the Duplex Metals Co., and Paris and London, where he has introduced the manufacture of his metals. In the United States his patents are exploited by the

HON. JOHN FERREOL MONNOT

Duplex Metals Co. of New York, of which he was president during 1905-08, when he resigned to extend his work abroad. PATTERSON, James Kennedy:
First President of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Kentucky (now the State University of Kentucky) since 1869. Was born in Glasgow, Scotland, March 26, 1833; son of Andrew and Janet (Kennedy) Patterson. In 1842 his parents emigrated to America, and settled on a farm in Bartholomew County, Indiana, where James lived until 1849, when he was sent to a school in Madison, Ind. After a year spent there he taught for one year, keeping up his studies meanwhile, until in May, 1851, he entered Hanover College, Ind. There, during the whole course, he led his class in almost every subject. He was graduated in 1856, and in the fall became principal of the Presbyterian Academy at Greenville, Muhlenberg County, Ky. Three years later he was appointed principal of the preparatory department of Stewart College, of Clarksville, Tenn., and in the following year was elected professor of Latin and Greek in the same institution. When the Civil War began, Stewart College suspended, and did not reopen until the conflict ended. Prof. Patterson, however, became principal of the Transylvania High School in Lexington, Ky., in 1861, remaining as such until 1865, when the school was consolidated with the Kentucky University. In 1866, Prof. Patterson was called to the chair of history and metaphysics in the Agricultural and Mechanical College of the consolidated institution. In 1869 he was made its president, and still (1910) occupies this position. The connection of this college with the Kentucky University continued until 1878, when it was dissolved by the legislature, and two years later the Agricultural and Mechanical College was placed on an independent basis. After a long contest with the denominational institution with which it had been previously incorporated, the persistent energy of the president brought the college victoriously through the struggle. It has since prospered, and now has eight courses of study leading to a degree; there are twenty-two professors and over forty assistants in the faculty, while the property has increased in value more than $500,000 since 1880. In 1875 Prof. Patterson was appointed by the Governor a delegate to represent Kentucky in the international congress of geographical sciences at Paris, France, and to the British Association for the Advancement of Science, which met at Bristol, England, in the same year. In 1890 a leave of absence was given him for one year, and he visited Belgium, France, Italy, Austria, Germany and Switzerland, and also took part as a delegate in the meeting of the British Association at Leeds. In 1859 he received the degree of A.M.; in 1875 that of Ph.D., from Hanover College; in 1880 was elected fellow of the Royal Historical Society of Great Britain, and fellow of the Society of Antiquaries of Edinburgh, Scotland, and in 1896 the degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by Lafayette College, Pennsylvania. He is also a member of the American Geographical Society, of the American Historical Association, of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, and a member and trustee of the American Civic Alliance. He is the author of a report of the proceedings of the geographical congress and of numerous articles on foreign affairs. Dr. Patterson was married, in 1859, to Lucella, youngest daughter of Capt. Charles F. Wing, of Greenville, Ky. Address: State University, Lexington, Ky., U.S.A.

PATTERSON, John, A.M., Litt.M., LL.D.:
Was born near Lexington, Ky., U.S.A., in 1861; son of John Wallace Patterson and Margaret Lightner Scott. He was educated at the State University of Kentucky, and at Harvard University. Morton & Co., Louisville, Ky.), 1895; "The Cyclops of Euripides" (Alex. Gardner, Paisley Co., London, and the Macmillan Co., New York), 1900. He is also the author of "The Satyr-Drama," "Pulvus Olympicus," in the Scottish Review; "Crete of Legend and Literature," et al., in the Independent, Education, and other periodicals and journals. He is a member of the American Philological Association and others. His critical edition of "Bion's Lament for Adonis," with translation into English verse, is now almost ready for press. A sketch of his life by Mr. James Lane Allen, and selections from his writings, will be found in the Library of Southern Literature. He is at present Dean (with full executive authority) of the Academic Department of the University of Louisville, U.S.A. Address: John Patterson, 119 W. Broadway, Louisville, Ky., U.S.A.

PATTI, Mme. Adelina:
The greatest operatic prima donna the world has ever seen; of late years heard once a year at the annual concert she has given at the Albert Hall. Madame Patti was born at Madrid, in 1843, but was taken to America when only a few years old, and in that country she appeared as a vocal prodigy. When she went to England, a young girl of seventeen, she had to sing at three performances for nothing. Now she can get £1,000 for three songs, and must have earned nearly two millions during the course of her brilliant career all over the world. The last time Madame Patti appeared at Covent Garden (in 1895) she wore jewels worth £250,000. Madame Patti has been married three times, first to the Marquis de Caux, then to Signor Nicolini, the famous tenor, and is now Baroness Cederstrom. The most uniformly popular and successful queen of song. Farewelled in London in 1906, and in Liverpool, Scotland and Ireland in 1907. PIUS X.: His Holiness, the Pope:
Is the 258th Roman Pontiff. His name is Giuseppe (Anglice, Joseph) Sarto, and he was born June 2, 1835, at Riese, in the diocese of Treviso, his father being a minor municipal official. His relatives are still shopkeepers and people of humble position. He was educated at Castelfranco and the diocesan seminary of Padua, and ordained priest, Sept. 18, 1858. He officiated nine years as parish priest of Salzano, and was made canon and chancellor of the diocese of Treviso in 1875. In 1884 he was appointed Bishop of Mantua, and Leo XIII made him a Cardinal and Patriarch of Venice in 1893. His charity and tact brought him unbounded popularity, and he was more than once instrumental in settling serious strikes and labor disputes. He came into direct personal contact with the King and Queen of Italy while he was Cardinal. He is credited with an inflexible resolve to maintain the rights and liberty of the Church. On the death of Leo XIII, July 20, 1903, the Conclave met, July 31, and on Aug. 4 at the seventh scrutiny, elected Cardinal Sarto as Pope, and he chose to be known as Pope Pius X. As priest and bishop his life was spent in the pastoral and episcopal service of the Church, rather than in the paths of diplomatic and official service. He is described as possessing a fine physique, and as a man of dignified presence and much personal attraction. He has always displayed much interest in social questions, and in bettering the life of the poor, to whom his charity at Venice was proverbial. He has shown himself zealous in the reform of Church music, and in other matters of ecclesiastical discipline. In May, 1907, he issued a decree entrusting the revision of the Vulgate to the Benedictine Order, and in September issued an Encyclical against the Modernist movement in the Church. It is said that the average annual expenses of the Vatican are about £286,400, and that of this sum £20,000 are at the Pope's disposal, £28,000 go to the support of cardinals resident in Rome, £18,400 to poor bishoprics, £72,000 for administration of apostolic palaces, £40,000 for diplomatic expenses, £60,000 for employees, £48,000 for schools and charities. Address: The Vatican, Rome, Italy.

City, and member of a family which has occupied a prominent place in the history of New York since early Colonial times and Augusta Mary Hull, of Derby, Conn., of a family equally prominent in the history of that State. She was a niece of Commodore Isaac Hull, who won distinction in the War of 1813 by the capture, while commanding the U.S.S. Constitution, of H.B.M. Guerriere. Dr. Platt's education was somewhat desultory, owing to interruptions due to ill health. He attended public schools, the Adelphi Academy (now college), and the Polytechnic Institute, in Brooklyn, and Columbia University, but a breakdown in health prevented his remaining long enough to receive an academic degree. During the years 1872-3-4-5 he resided most of the time in Tennessee and Alabama, where he studied law, and in 1875 was admitted to the Bar of the State of Alabama. He then returned to New York, and entered the Law School of Columbia University, and was admitted to the New York Bar in 1878. He then, with a view to giving special attention to Medical Jurisprudence attended medical lectures at the Long Island College Hospital in Brooklyn, and the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York. In 1883 he took his degree of M.D. In 1886, he married Emma Haviland, daughter of the late Aaron G. Haviland, of Westchester County, N.Y., and removed to Lakewood, N.J., where he practiced medicine until 1898. He then went to Europe, where he spent most of the time until 1901. Upon his return he did not resume medical practice, but took up his residence in N.Y. City and devoted himself to literary pursuits. In 1905 removed to Wallingford, Pa., where he now resides. Author of: "Walt Whitman," a biography in the series known as "The Beacon Biographies"; "Bacon Cryptograms in Shakespeare," and numerous articles in medical and literary periodicals.
